

[Jack] Nicholson admitted that he deserved his reputation as a rake: ‘Well, you know, I have had a very expressive life in that area’. But he said that he had begun to wonder if he might have been happier being married, as by sharing a lifetime together in one’s old age ‘the archives of our memories and so forth would be intertwined’.

The Telegraph, London